Introduction To Rap Interiors

We established RAP Office Contracts in 1988 and have been delivering a 'hands-on' personal experience since then to all our clients, ensuring that every project runs smoothly from concept to completion through constant dialogue, collaborating with the entire team, and providing advice every step of the way.

Rap Interiors was recently formed as a result of repeated requests from clients and professionals to compliment our amazing interior design approach with furniture supply and fit-out, to offer the ultimate turnkey solution.

"We work to achieve whole life value for every client with the lowest whole life cost – for every project."

Our clients enjoy 1-2-1 focussed attention, with a single point of contact throughout the project; taking comfort in the knowledge that their contact has behind them the experienced and committed resource of the entire Rap Team.

From our offices in Kent, Brighton, Croydon and London, we design, supply, install, and hand over, stunning interiors across the UK.

As a successful family business with over 28 years' experience, we consistently demonstrate commitment to our clients, their professional teams, every project we start and finish, and – equally as important – our commitment to the development of the people that together form the Rap Team, who we consider to be diamonds in this industry.

What Is An Office Pod?

Pea pod? A pod of whales? What do we mean?

Office pods offer a great modular quiet-room solution for open plan office spaces - creating a room within a room!

It all began in the early 20th century, where open plan offices were rarely heard of and seen as a novelty. Some architects and designers such as Frank Lloyd Wright despised walls and doors due to their lack of flexibility and spaciousness. This hatred sparked an idea, which was introduced by a German design group named Quickborner in the 1950s. They created the 'bürolandschaft' meaning 'office landscape'.

Times have now changed and office pods vary in design depending on the requirement of the space. Their main function is to create a room. Glazed office pods offer a modern looking open space similar of that to a glazed partition, but without the need to be fixed. Acoustic panels can also be added to pods to enhance privacy for meetings, training, office work & phone calls. The pods are built around a screen panel frame & are linked together to create a room or series of rooms without the need for any wall fixings, making the pods a great demountable acoustic solution.

What Is A Booth?

The modern day acoustic and break out solution!

With more open plan workspaces and increased numbers of staff squeezed in to smaller offices, a noise issue has arisen. Office pods of the past have also had this issue so what's the solution?

This acoustic issue can be addressed by the use of office booths which have been designed to aid in the reduction of travelling sounds. Office booths are a furniture item and therefore can be placed almost anywhere within the workplace and make good use of dead space. Larger office booths which can be located closer to the workforce can incorporate additional furniture such as meeting tables, desks & seating which allows users to work and meeting in a quieter setting.

However, the design of the booth is forever changing and manufacturers are now developing acoustic office furniture can be placed almost anywhere within the office environment.

Acoustic armchairs and privacy sofas can be positioned individually for private work or phone calls or positioned and linked together to create larger team collaboration areas for team work, meetings and training. Many sofa ranges include linking walls which create booths.

Overall Booths, Hubs, Acoustic Furniture are a fun, useful and desired item for any workspace!
